

Where do you go from here?

Up until now, your teachers and counselors have pretty much told you what classes you needed to take and when you needed to take them in order to graduate.

Now, you hold in your hands the power to decide where to go from here.

Whether it be a technical school to learn about a specific trade or a four-year university, there is a school out there that is perfect for you.

So how do you find that one perfect school?

First, you need to consider what you want out of a school.

Some of the most important things to think about are location, size, available programs and cost. Campus life, diversity, athletics and extra-curricular activities are also considerations.

Don't choose a school simply because that's where your friends are going. This is a time for new beginnings and opportunities. Step out of the box and make a decision that's right for you.

State Universities

More choices

You'll find the major you want and degree programs from bachelor's to doctorates.

Cost factor

The price will be low compared to most other bachelor's degree or graduate programs. That frees up cash for other parts of your college life.

More stuff happening on campus

Big schools become hubs for cultural events, big-time sports, special interest groups, clubs, activities, fraternities and sororities, even political action groups.

Research

Some of the biggest library collections and labs in the nation are at the state's larger universities. They're aimed at giving students like you the research tools to expand the limits of knowledge in a variety of fields.
